THREE KILLED WHEN AIRPLANE CRASHES; TRAFFIC TOLL HEAVY

Parachute Jumper Killed;
Three Die In Auto
Crash

By The United Press

Nearly a score of lives were wiped out in airplane and automobile accidents in Ohio over the week-end, a survey by the United Press today revealed.

Three men were killed at Harrison, near Cincinnati, when an airplane nose-dived into a corn field and burst into flames, and a fourth man was killed near Cleveland in an attempted parachute jump.

The Harrison victims were Joe Hite, Louisville parachute jumper; Homer Nussers, Indianapolis pilot, and Harold Biddle of Harrison, a passenger.

The Cleveland victim was William Lowry, 24, Parma fireman. Hite and his companions were killed after he made a successful parachute jump from an altitude of 2,500 feet and had ascended for a second leap.

The plane went into a sudden nose dive, and crashed 300 feet from the Harrison airport. As the plane landed it tipped over and burst into flames.

The victims were hopelessly trapped.

Lowry, making his 281st leap, plunged 1,000 feet to his death when the leg straps of his parachute gave way and released his body. Lowry apparently had fastened the straps imperfectly, and was jerked loose when the parachute opened. The tragedy occurred during an exhibition at the Pleasant Valley Commercial Air Field at Parma, O., and was witnessed by 1,800 people.

The major automobile fatality occurred at Mt. Liberty, near Mt. Vernon where three persons were killed and three were injured, two seriously, when two automobiles collided.

The accident apparently occurred as the cars attempted to pass.

Those killed were Peter Busen, 45, farmer of Howard, Knox County; his 7-year-old son, Robert, and Willard McElroy, 50, Millwood farmer.

Ivan Busen, 10, another son, and Mrs. Albert Ingalls of Cleveland, were badly hurt. Mrs. Ingalls' husband, suffering minor hurts.

The Ingalls had been visiting in Columbus and were driving to Cleveland when the crash occurred.

Two women were killed and an aged man was perhaps fatally injured when a train hit their new automobile at a crossing near Cardington, while they were attempting to push the stalled machine from the tracks.

The victims were Mrs. Minnie Traphagen, 74, and her daughter, Mrs. H. M. Dressel, Mrs. Traphagen's husband, 74, is not expected to live. Mrs. Dressel's husband, Arnold, escaped when he leaped aside.

The car had just been purchased and Dressel, who was unfamiliar with it, was driving. The car stalled as the train was approaching, crossing watchman and others shouted a warning, but the victims apparently failed to hear. The next moment the train ploughed through the machine.

Other fatalities were reported as follows:

CLEVELAND — Mrs. Katherine McDonald, Abraham Strivack and Albert Grze, 4. Two men held on manhandling charges in death of woman and boy.

CINCINNATI — Jesse Coons, 50, run down by negro who was captured as he attempted to flee.

MADISONVILLE — Carl Tenney, 45, killed in motorcycle crash near Maysville, Ky., Harlan Carrett, 9, Manchester, O., seriously hurt.

AKRON — Mrs. Ella Witterstey, 57, George Jussell, 60, and Thomas Jones of Cleveland. Jones was fatally injured when his automobile was hit by an interurban, Friday. His wife was killed in the crash.

LAKEWOOD — William Griffin, Cleveland deaf mute, killed when car hit by train.

COLUMBUS — Archie Lyle, 30, hit by car, driver arrested.

MATAMORA — Roy Pifer, Matamoros, killed in race at Huntington, Ind., when tire blew out. Ten other drivers were competing.

MEXICO CATHOLICS CELEBRATE END OF RELIGIOUS DISPUTE

Thousands Visit Church
In Spirit Of Thanksgiving

MEXICO CITY, June 24.—Devout Mexican Catholics spent their first Sunday since the settlement of the religious dispute between the Mexican government and the Catholic church in a great thanksgiving that the church was restored to them.

The thanksgiving, restrained and orderly, but with genuine devotion, began Saturday morning, a few hours after the agreement was announced.

It will last for a week, with only the nights to break the long lines of pilgrims going to the sanctuary of the Santa Maria Church of Guadalupe.

The throng was especially enormous Sunday when thousands of Mexicans, rich and poor, proud and humble, moved slowly along the roads to the Santa Maria Church, bearing flowers to lay on those that other thousands had placed on the altar Saturday, or candles to burn as they passed in to the edifice.

Some murmured prayers as they went at a shuffle pace with the closely packed throngs.

Lay services and singing were held at the church every hour, with devout Catholics packed in the building so closely that they barely had room to kneel.

No priests appeared throughout the two days, and the services were of the same nature as they conducted during the past three years.

The first Catholic service conducted by a priest in three years will be held in the Guadalupe Church next Sunday, according to present plans.

It will mark the formal restoration of the priesthood, and will be a signal for the reopening, as rapidly as possible of 5,000 other churches throughout the country.

Most of the bishops in Mexico were expected to join in next Sunday's special mass.

They will be headed by Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, apostolic delegate to Mexico and Archbishop Pasqual Diaz, newly appointed titular head of the Mexican Church, both of whom acted for the pope during negotiations with President Emilio Portes Gil for settlement of the dispute.

END MEXICAN RELIGIOUS DISPUTE

Simultaneous announcements by Archbishop Leopoldo Ruiz y Flores, left, senior member of the Catholic hierarchy in Mexico, and President Emilio Portes Gil, right, have stated the three-year controversy between church and state is at an end. The agreement, which was brought about to a large extent through the efforts of American Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, inset, permits reoccupation of the churches by priests.

AMERICANS ACTIVE IN DIPLOMACY OVER CAPITALS OF WORLD

Moore In Peru Added To Morrow And Young
Successes

WASHINGTON, June 24.—From the plazas of Mexico the boulevards of Paris, Americans recently have been active in diplomacy which will aid in shaping the trend of international events.

American participation in the adjustment of foreign problems has increased instead of diminished since the senate ten years ago rejected the allegedly entangling alliances inherent in the Versailles treaty and the League of Nations.

Observers are pointing to this situation in support of the belief the United States has never sought to pursue an isolationist policy.

American activities in settlement of foreign problems have been of various types. Ambassador Dwight W. Morrow, whose friendly counsel is known to have expedited settlement of the Mexican religious controversy last week acted secretly and in a private capacity.

Owen D. Young, American chairman of the reparations expert committee which has just reported from Paris, acted as private American citizen.

While these two Americans were busy respectively with religious and financial matters, Ambassador Alexander P. Moore in Peru was formally engaged in helping Chile and Peru settle their controversy over the provinces of Tacna and Arica.

The dispute ended this spring in an adjustment satisfactory to both parties. Former Secretary of State Kellogg, who was in consultation with the Chilean and Peruvian ambassadors here, is credited with having taken the most important American part in the negotiations.

One of the reverses to American diplomacy occurred in connection with Tacna Arica when it was found impossible to adjust the dispute by means of a plebiscite which President Coolidge, as arbitrator, had recommended.

Before Tacna Arica could be gotten out of the way, Bolivia and Paraguay were on the verge of war to determine sovereignty over a vast, largely unexplored area lying between them and known as the Gran Chaco. Brig. Gen. Frank R. McCoy is chairman of the commission now in session here in an attempt to adjust the difficulty.

The former professor confessed that after hitting the girl with a hammer he cut her jugular vein "to relieve her suffering." She had threatened to kill him and his wife and baby because he planned on going to Lebanon to visit relatives, he said.

Miss Hix was a second year medical student. Her mutilated body was found on the New York Central rifle range. Snook who had been seen with her in his blue coupe, was arrested through the efforts of Garland Hick, a United Press correspondent, and James Fusco, a Columbus Citizen reporter.

The sealed casket was re-opened Saturday, then re-sealed, but it was decided the body would not be shipped until after the arraignment.

Snook's voice was loud and clear. "Not guilty," he said.

Snook was then set for July 22, over objections of Seidel who demanded more time to prepare the defense.

Judge Duncan said a jury panel of seventy-five names would be drawn.

It was all over in a few moments. Gunning also pleaded not guilty and an insanity hearing for him was arranged.

Seidel estimated he would demand a change of venue. He said so much publicity had been given the case that he believed a fair and impartial trial here was impossible.

Meantime Melvin T. Hix, father of the slain coed, prepared to remove her body to Binghamton, N. Y., for burial.

SNOOK PLEADS NOT GUILTY TO DEATH CHARGE

Confessed Slayer Reverses Plans; Trial
July 22

COLUMBUS, O., June 24.—Dr. James H. Snook, confessed slayer of Theora Hix, Ohio State University co-ed, pleaded not guilty today when he was arraigned on a first degree murder charge.

The plea, in effect, repudiated the former university instructor's confession that he killed the girl because she "tried to dominate his life" and threatened to kill his wife and baby.

Judge Robert P. Duncan set trial for July 22.

The plea had been anticipated. The deposed professor's attorneys, John F. Seidel and E. O. Ricketts, said they would not permit their client to plead guilty.

Snook, after his confession last week, said he would plead guilty and "trust to the mercy of the court." The court is empowered to impose death or life imprisonment as the penalty.

Miss Hix was killed ten days ago. Snook, who admitted he maintained a "love nest" for her, confessed the fifth day after his arrest.

His confession told how he had known the girl intimately for three years and how finally he killed her because she tried to dominate his life.

The arraignment took place while three state alienists were preparing to report on the bespectacled professor's mental condition.

Snook was placed under observation Saturday, the test being interpreted as a move by the state to counteract an insanity defense expected when the trial begins.

Snook was brought into the court room handcuffed to Albert C. Gunning who is charged with killing his wife.

Five other prisoners accompanied them.

Snook was neatly dressed in a grey suit, white shirt, with spot collar, and red dotted tie. His shoes also had been polished.

The bald instructor ignored the crowd as if he saw nothing. He was the sixth prisoner arraigned.

Judge Duncan directed the clerk to read the indictment, and Snook stood with one hand in his pocket while this was done.

Judge Duncan then asked: "Guilty or not guilty?"

Snook's voice was loud and clear. "Not guilty," he said.

Snook was then set for July 22, over objections of Seidel who demanded more time to prepare the defense.

Judge Duncan said a jury panel of seventy-five names would be drawn.

It was all over in a few moments. Gunning also pleaded not guilty and an insanity hearing for him was arranged.

EXPECT BETWEEN 500 AND 1,000 AT EX-PUPILS' REUNION HERE

"Pioneer Day" Will Be Feature Of Annual Event;
Will Honor Pioneers As Old Trades Building
Is Bidden Farewell At Meeting

Between 500 and 1,000 persons are expected to attend the annual reunion of former pupils of the O. S. and S. O. Home to be held July 2, 3 and 4 at the institution under auspices of the Association of Ex-Pupils.

The chief feature of the three-day celebration will be the observance of July 3 as "Pioneer Day" when a farewell tribute will be paid to the old frame industrial building, erected in January, 1879, one of the original group of structures comprising the nucleus of the present institution, which is soon to be razed. This historic structure will be replaced by the new $100,000 trades building to be built with an appropriation allowed the Home this year by the state legislature.

A few months ago the old industrial building was condemned by the state fire marshal for living quarters and the second floor was abandoned. The first floor, however, is still in use. For many years the building was used as a trades building with living quarters for some of the employees. The carpenter and paint shops have been situated on the first floor.

Since it has been condemned as unfit for further use, has been pronounced a fire hazard and otherwise dangerous to be left standing in its present condition, Major C. V. Burton, superintendent, decided that the most appropriate time to carry out the order of the state department would be at the time of the reunion when the former students at the Home would be present in large numbers.

He also suggested to Charles Eckert, Greenfield, O., president of the association, that the wrecking of the old Home should be attended by a suitable ceremony in honor of the founders of the institution.

These suggestions were readily agreed to and accepted and later the president appointed Edward W. Hughes, parliamentarian of the Ohio House of Representatives, as chairman of a committee to arrange for the ceremony. Still later it was decided that an appropriate and comprehensive name for the occasion would be "Pioneer Day."

WELLINGTON, New Zealand, June 24.—The complete evacuation of the entire Marchion district was underway today as result of renewed earth tremors which have terrorized the populace.

Practically all the inhabitants of the adjoining valleys have fled to Wellington. Most of them fled in such haste that they left behind even what was not destroyed by the quakes and had nothing except the clothing they were wearing.

Two severe tremors shook the district Sunday, one of them so powerful that the light at Farewell Cape was extinguished. Previous quakes had been felt in the Marchion, Taka and Westport district on Saturday afternoon.

LONDON, June 24.—Daily mail dispatches from Christ Church, N. The reports said the populace walked the streets throughout Saturday night, fearing to enter the buildings.

LONDON, June 24.—Wellington, N. Z., dispatches to the London Daily Telegraph revealed today that as a result of the recent earthquake Mount Stevens, nearly 4,000 feet high, disappeared completely. ## LAUNCH SEARCH FOR PLANE MISSING ON FLIGHT OVER OCEAN

Aviators Failed To Reach
Azores Is Belief
Now.

MADRID, June 24.—Several squadrons of Spanish seaplanes and four destroyers from Galicia fleet, under direct orders from Premier Primo De Rivera, began a search of the North Atlantic today in the hope of finding a trace of the missing seaplane in which Commander Ramon Franco and three companions were attempting to fly from Spain to the United States via the Azores Islands.

In spite of conflicting reports from various points that the Spanish flyers had landed safely at one of the Azores islands, the government apparently has abandoned all hope that a safe landing had been made and dispatched the destroyers and seaplanes to make a thorough search of the path over which the huge Dornier plane probably traveled.

With Franco on the attempted flight to New York and return were Major Eduardo Galarza, Captain Ruiz de Alda and Pedro Madariaga, a mechanic.

They left Cartagena, Spain late Friday afternoon and were scheduled to arrive at the Azores Saturday morning.

When they failed to arrive it was believed at first that they had drifted off their course in the mist and fog and would be delayed but a few hours.

When they failed to arrive by Saturday noon, anxiety was felt by everyone here. Then conflicting reports began to pour in from all points.

The Spanish people had such great faith in their flyers that some of them believed the seaplane might have detoured and headed straight for the United States, not stopping at the Azores as they had planned. But this was regarded by experts as impossible in view of the fact that the plane did not carry sufficient fuel for such a long trip.

According to varying reports the seaplane, Dornier No. 16, must have drifted off its course while en route to the Azores, where it had intended to refuel before making the final drive across the Atlantic to the United States.

The Dreidon, an Italian steamer, reported to the radio station at Horta, Azores, that it had heard what sounded like an airplane motor about 200 miles southeast of San Miguel, one of the Azores group of islands, Saturday morning.

If what the steamer had heard was the motor of the Spanish seaplane, it would indicate that the flyers had lost their way and were unable to locate the Azores Islands.

Primo De Rivera announced officially last night that in spite of the various reports, the Spanish government had received no news from Franco and his companions since they left Spain.

When direct confirmation of the landing failed to come from the Azores, the premier hastily summoned the minister of marine and ordered that immediate steps be taken to find the aviators.

Franco is the leading airman of Spain, who once crossed the Atlantic safely, to South America.

The Portuguese gunboat Zaires, which was at the Azores when the flyers were expected, already had started to search for the missing plane.

The Zaires began its search north and west, working toward Fayal Island, which was the scheduled stopping place for the Dornier seaplane.

ARNOLDS, CONVICTED IN HORST KIDNAPING, GIVEN NEW TRIALS

AKRON, O., June 24.—The ninth district court of appeals today granted new trials to Elias and Arthur Arnold, both of whom are serving terms for the alleged kidnaping of 4-year-old Melvin Horst of Orrville.

Elias Arnold is serving twenty years in the state penitentiary and Arthur, 17, is serving an indeterminate sentence in the Mansfield Reformatory.

The two were convicted on the testimony of Junior Hanna, 3, Melvin's playmate, who said he saw them entice Melvin into their yard, then drive away with "a bundle," presumably the child, in an automobile.

Both Elias and his son appealed shortly after sentence was imposed, their attorneys assailing the story of the Hanna boy as "a pure fabrication."

The Horst boy disappeared last year. No trace of him has ever been found. The state contended the Arnolds kidnaped him because his uncle, the village marshal, had arrested them for bootlegging.

Wash your dishes with Melo

Melo softens hard water and makes it a wonderful cleaner, with or without soap. A tablespoonful in the dishpan cuts grease, saves hands and makes the soap much more effective.

No scum forms. Scum is the result of the hardness in hard water combining with soap. But scum never forms in soft water. Scum never forms in water softened with Melo. Get it at your grocer's.

INTERLUDE

THE days grow shorter, the nights grow longer, The headstones thicken along the way; And life grows sadder, but love grows stronger For those who walk with us, day by day.

The tears come quicker, the laugh comes slower, The courage is lesser to do and dare; And the tide of joy in the heart runs lower And seldom covers the reefs of care.

But all true things in the world seem truer, And the better things of the earth seem blest; And friends are dearer as friends are fewer, And love is all as our sun dips west.

Then let us clasp hands as we walk together, And let us speak softly, in love's sweet tone, For no man knows, on the morrow, whether We two pass by, or but one alone.

REAL VALUE IN CAMPS

Because a boy or young man goes into a gymnasium and learns to box and at the same time gives his body some healthful general training, it does not follow that he is going to become a plug ugly, traveling about with a chip on his shoulder and wantonly attacking those who are weaker or less proficient with their fists than he. Given a youngster with normally good instincts and tendencies, and the contrary is true. The poise and sense of equality with those he meets, which he acquires, and the knowledge that he has ability to take care of himself in case of need, are likely to make him despise quarrelsomeness and bullying and induce him to become a champion rather than an assailant of the weak. He respects himself and he respects others.

Because a boy or young man goes into a Citizens' Military Training camp and learns something about the art of national defense and at the same time becomes bronzed and physically fit as a result of healthful training and life in the open, it does not in the least follow that he is going to become a militarist and go out and shout for war, and advocate a policy of predatory imperialism.

Preparedness is likely to increase rather than lessen the spirit that freed Cuba and asked nothing in return, that assisted Nicaragua to get on its feet and demanded no price, that sent the country into Haiti and Santo Domingo to assist them, and waits only evidence that they have learned to run their own affairs, before leaving them entirely to their devices.

We know all that means nothing to persons with a pacifist complex, but relatively few people in the country are really afflicted with the disability or actually believe that the only way for the United States to keep out of mischief and avoid becoming a bully, is to make it unable to do anything except cringe and bootlick in case of attack. Most Americans prefer to look those they meet squarely in the eyes. They want a country they can respect and that can command respect from others, and that, while careful to deal fairly and avoid occasion for difference, can take care of itself if need arises, and can protect friends and neighbors in danger of oppression.

To such people we offer a reminder that the summer training camps, where elementary military instruction is taught the free youth of the republic, will soon be opening. The quota for the camps, where the boys and young men of this state will be received, ought to be filled with a rush.

We wonder whether some of the rabid wets ever stop to think how ridiculous they make themselves by kicking up all this row for the benefit of criminal distributors of poison booze.

After all, is loose speculation in Wall street any worse than loose talk in the senate?

BO-BROADWAY

By JOSEPH VAN RAALTE

NEW YORK—Anent the taxi situation in New York and commissioner Whalen's refusal at first to approve meters to the White Horse company that seeks to place 5,000 taxis on the streets at ten cents for the first quarter mile and five cents for each additional quarter.

Whalen's contention is that 21,000 taxis are enough for any town and that if the present fleet is increased by the advent of a lot of Ford four-seaters, as contemplated, there'll hardly be room for the street cleaners to get about it.

A statistician has figured out that if traffic regulations were amended forbidding empties, scouting for passengers, to make left turns, it would speed up traffic five percent. This little five percent, he says, would permit comfortably, 3,000 additional cabs to be added to those already licensed.

A New York milkman was struck by a truck and lost a leg. A jury awarded him $70,000 damages.

On the same day, the wife of a man who was struck by an automobile, and his mind shattered, got a verdict of $17,000.

That shows what New York juries think of brains.

One of New York's "Pilgrim Mothers who missed the first boat" had her clothing ignited the other day and got her name in the paper. Her name is Lillian Buzzuszyusky.

A gentleman with a monicker similar to that climbed to the witness stand in a magistrate's court recently. He was asked his name and told it.

"Did you get that?" the magistrate inquired of the stenographer. "Not the whole thing, your honor," replied the disciple of Pitman, "only a whiff of it as it went by."

THE WAY of the WORLD

By GROVE PATTERSON

SHIPS THAT COME IN
The author of the following lines is unknown to the writer of this column:

"Dark brown is the river, golden is the sand;
It flows along forever with trees on every hand.
Green leaves a-floating, castles of the foam.
Boats of mine a-floating—where will all come home?"

On goes the river and out past the mill.
Away down the river, away down the hill.
Away down the river a hundred miles or more,
Other little children shall bring my boats ashore.

Like little children we are forever setting our boats afloat on the stream. They are boats of hopes and boats of ideas. They are little ships of dreams. Perhaps sometimes they are ships of kindness and happy investment. They pass out of sight, out of mind, out of our lives.

Somewhere, somehow, they come into port. Be sure of that.

RADIO PREACHING

Today's preacher, not many, but a growing number, speaks over the radio to an invisible audience of thousands. Perhaps, if he is famous like Cadman or Fiedick, he speaks to millions. Old-time preachers, some of them alive today, gave forty or fifty years to the ministry. Year in and year out they preached twice every Sunday. And in their whole lives they preached to fewer different people than a radio preacher today reaches on a single Sunday.

Words, always dangerous, are vastly more far-reaching in this modern world. The man who approaches the microphone carries upon his shoulders a heavy load of responsibility.

REALITIES

What are realities? Facts are realities but facts are not the only ones. Religion is a reality. Faith is a reality. Sentiment is a reality. We sometimes make the mistake of being too practical. There is such a thing as being so practical as to be inaccurate, to lose touch with a whole side of life. All life's realities and all death's realities can not be measured by the measuring stick of facts. The things of the spirit are as real as the things of the physical world.

FAIRNESS

There is nothing to which the normal man will respond more quickly or more pleasantly than to a spirit of fairness. The disposition to be fair, no matter what your beliefs will get you a long distance in this world.

Who's Who and Timely Views

By RAY LYMAN WILBUR

Secretary of the Interior (Ray Lyman Wilbur was born at Boonesboro, Ia., April 13, 1875. He is a graduate of Stanford university and a member of the Stanford Medical college, later studying abroad. He holds honorary degrees from several universities. From 1900 to 1903 he was assistant professor in physiology at Stanford university, and professor in medicine there from 1903 to 1916, being dean of the school for five years. Since 1916 he has been president of Stanford. He was made secretary of the interior by President Hoover last March. In 1917 he was chief of the conservative division, U. S. Food Administration in Washington. He is a member of various societies and medical organizations.)

The responsibility for the handling of the problem of oil conservation in the United States lies with the petroleum industry and the governments of oil-producing states.

The oil industry faces a difficult and complicated situation which can only be met by an earnest study of all of the factors involved and by a spirit of co-operation. This is a gasoline civilization here in America. It is acknowledged that there are considerable preventable wastes in the handling of our oil supplies. These are due to the wastes of gas and oil, the use of gasoline containing crude oils in other than gasoline engines, the large amounts left in the ground because of badly managed attacks upon pools and the waste from evaporation due to the expensive storage above ground.

It is also acknowledged that there is a limited supply of oil available. Estimates vary, but the present volume of production is expected to last for less than a decade.

Only a small portion of the producing lands are in the public domain, although a large potential supply in those areas should be safeguarded. In some states conservation legislation is being enacted, but the federal government is not interfering with the rights and duties of the local state governments, but to lend such aid as it can and to participate in the solution of the problems. This administration has no desire to concentrate the forces of government in Washington. It has every desire to co-operate with the states.

The suggestion has been made that some form of co-operation between the states and the national government would be the most effective method of eliminating waste and conserving our limited supply, and that by such action we could avoid all price-fixing operations. The aim is to conserve the laws of the major producing states by the enactment of identical conservation legislation and the uniformity of enforcement by some body, such as a joint commission. This could be created by a simple compact of the states ratified by congress.

At all events a good many of the $250 are scared half to death. They voted with their hearts in the election. They are scared until after they are re-elected next year—if their districts do re-elect them. Of course if they are beaten, that will end it. That's what they had to take their chances on—and why they are so scared.

To the relatively small number of representatives from districts like Greater New York's couple of a dozen, who voted as they did on general principles of one sort or another, the side they took makes no particular political difference. What does a big city care how its congressmen vote on a farm question?

But to all lawmakers from agricultural states—the wheat belt especially—the issue is one of life and death at the polls in 1930. No wonder they squirm.

Consider the debenture plan. To begin with—What is tariff protection? Why, it is a partial monopoly (rapidly verging on an air-tight one) which certain interests, especially manufacturers, enjoy—enabling them to charge like sixty for everything they have to sell.

The farmers enjoy no such monopoly—not many of them, anyway. This seems to be what ails the farmers. At any rate a lot of them think so. They have to sell cheap, while buying dear—a big disadvantage.

The debenture plan was a scheme to give them a bonus (some of its advocates denied that it would be a bonus, but it would, just the same) to offset agriculture's handicap.

There are four arguments—1. An agricultural bonus would be a gift to the farmers, out of other people's pockets; therefore wrong. 2. It would be an application of the protective principles; therefore o. k. 3. A farm bonus would be wrong, but so is a protective tariff wrong. So long as the industries get a big tariff rakeoff, the farmers are entitled to a bonus. 4. Two wrongs do not make a right; so the injustice of a monopoly is no excuse for a bonus, too.

Congressional opinion on the subject was a mixed up mess, with Republicans and Democrats dividing every which-way.

Two facts were evident in the midst of the confusion—1. President Hoover was against debentures. 2. The bulk of the farmers were in favor of them—why wouldn't they be?—a nice present, on a silver platter!

To the disgust of the president and his friends, the senate took the debenture clause into the farm bill—to the presidential folk's disgust not only because they considered debentures "uneconomic," but also because the senate's disregard of the White House's wishes amounted to a stiff poke in the administration's back.

There was still the house of representatives to fall back on—to kill the scheme. However, dozens of representatives did not want to vote at all. If they voted for debentures, they knew they would make the president sore. If they voted against them, they were afraid they would make their home folk sore.

Their leaders fought like tigers to make the senate take the clause out of the bill, to save the representatives from having to go on record on it.

No good—the senate made them do it.

"Then let's make a thorough job of it," cried the infuriated bosses of the house of representatives.

The lower house is very different from the senate. The senators refuse to be bossed. Speaker Longworth, Majority Leader Tilson and Rules Committee Chairman Snell have got a system in the lower house that could give cards and spades to the best despotism that Ivan the Terrible ever had to offer.

The way that trio herd on their flock, on the debenture proposition, was a sight to remember. They scooped in Democrats as well as Republicans.

The upshot was 250 to 113 against the debenture plan.

It was a wonderful triumph for President Hoover—and Bosses Longworth, Tilson and Snell. It remains to be seen how much of a triumph it was for a lot of the representatives who voted the way the bosses told them to.

And oh! how scared those representatives are! of the next election.

THE FARMER ISN'T THE ONLY ONE WHO IS RELIEVED

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

One of the greatest aids to summer beauty and freshness is the commonplace rite of the bath—as I scarcely need to remind you. You bathe daily at all seasons, of course, to keep dainty and fresh, and to fill your soul with the luxurious restfulness that only a soft, warm, fragrant bath can bring.

But in the summer time you bathe even more often and the bath becomes a doubly or triply important beauty rite. Nothing makes you feel so cool and dainty and satisfied in the warm days of summer as a frequent shower bath. You may "tub" yourself often, too, since tub baths are excellent cleansers, but the shower bath is the summer beauty bath par excellence.

Even after a dip in the briny ocean you need the final refreshing touch of a cool, clean shower spray to cleanse you perfectly and to satisfy your sense of daintiness, as an ocean bath never can.

Twice a day is not too often to take a shower when the weather is exceedingly warm. And if you are a tennis or golf enthusiast you may need to bathe even oftener. At any event you should start your day with a cool shower, tapering off to cold. If you are one who mistrusts the joys of a cold morning bath, the summer is a fine time for you to learn to like it.

Begin gently with a tepid shower. Lather yourself well with a bland, soft cleansing bath soap, and let the vigorous shower spray carry away every bit of residue from your several millions of pores. Rinse yourself well with the tepid water, then finish with a quick, cold splash. Gradually you will make the cold rinse longer and your circulation will improve under the reaction until your skin is as smooth and fine as silk.

A cold shower such as this will start your day off properly all through the summer. It will stimulate your skin to react healthily to the effects of heat and sun, and your pores will throw off their accumulations of dust, perspiration and oil normally, with less tendency to become clogged.

During the day you may repeat the tepid shower and cold rinse whenever you feel the need. And in the evening a final shower will send you to bed feeling cool and clean and perfectly ready to sleep. If you do not live near the seashore so that you can have the benefit of an invigorating salt bath frequently, you may like to take with your shower an occasional salt rub. Use plain table salt and rub it in handfuls over your moistened body. Then spray clear cold water all over you for several minutes.

No less important than the bath itself are the dainty accessories which go with it. A deodorant talcum powder to puff under your arm-pits and over your hands and feet and delicately scented bath powder to put all over your body, are finishing touches of good grooming that make the summer bath a delightful beauty rite.

And when you bathe in a tub you can use, also, the delicately fragrant bath salts that come in powder or crystal form. Be sure that the scent you choose is delicate and clean-smelling rather than too sweet or heavy. Any scent for the summer season should be light and vaguely elusive. Pine scents, lavender or faintly pungent geranium are much more appropriate than carnation, narcissus or gardenia.

WASHINGTON, June 21.—A considerably more than two-to-one majority probably never was quite so badly scared before as the 250 congressmen who voted down the opposition group of 113 on the debenture clause in the farm relief bill in the house of representatives a few days ago.

At all events a good many of the $250 are scared half to death. They voted with their hearts in the election. Congressional opinion on the subject was a mixed up mess, with Republicans and Democrats dividing every which-way.

Two facts were evident in the midst of the confusion—1. President Hoover was against debentures. 2. The bulk of the farmers were in favor of them—why wouldn't they be?—a nice present, on a silver platter!

To the disgust of the president and his friends, the senate took the debenture clause into the farm bill—to the presidential folk's disgust not only because they considered debentures "uneconomic," but also because the senate's disregard of the White House's wishes amounted to a stiff poke in the administration's back.

There was still the house of representatives to fall back on—to kill the scheme. However, dozens of representatives did not want to vote at all. If they voted for debentures, they knew they would make the president sore. If they voted against them, they were afraid they would make their home folk sore.

Their leaders fought like tigers to make the senate take the clause out of the bill, to save the representatives from having to go on record on it.

No good—the senate made them do it.

"Then let's make a thorough job of it," cried the infuriated bosses of the house of representatives.

The lower house is very different from the senate. The senators refuse to be bossed. Speaker Longworth, Majority Leader Tilson and Rules Committee Chairman Snell have got a system in the lower house that could give cards and spades to the best despotism that Ivan the Terrible ever had to offer.

The way that trio herd on their flock, on the debenture proposition, was a sight to remember. They scooped in Democrats as well as Republicans.

The upshot was 250 to 113 against the debenture plan.

It was a wonderful triumph for President Hoover—and Bosses Longworth, Tilson and Snell. It remains to be seen how much of a triumph it was for a lot of the representatives who voted the way the bosses told them to.

And oh! how scared those representatives are! of the next election.

During the season, the rhus plants bring the largest number of D. V. to the clinics. These plants are the rhus toxicodendron (poison ivy), a climbing tree; rhus poison oak, a small tree or shrub, and poison sumac.

ber of leaves as there are letters that sufferers from poison plants should do is to learn to distinguish them. I'll give you a brief description of them, as given in the Government Bulletin No. 584. (You can obtain this by writing to the Superintendent of Documents, Government Printing Office, Washington. The cost is 5 cents in stamps.)

The poison ivy and oak are found practically everywhere except above an elevation of 6,000 feet, and very dry places—in fields, pastures, woodlands, along roadways and streams, cemetery and suburb.

The ivy and oak leaves are in clusters of three. (You can remember them as having the same number of leaves, as there are letters in the word "ivy.") Two of the leaves are opposite each other and are short-stalked, while the middle, or terminal leaf, is long-stalked. The leaflets vary from one to four inches long, dark green on the upper surface, lighter and sometimes velvety, with fine hairs underneath. The edges of the leaves may be smooth or deeply indented. They are red when young—later green—and in the autumn beautiful shades of scarlet and orange. They are very ornamental, and are often picked by the unknowing for decorative purposes.

Small, inconspicuous yellowish-green flowers in loose branching clusters, growing out of the angles of the leaf stalk and its stem, appear in early summer and ripen into fruit (not unlike the mistletoe berries), first green and later white. These remain on the plant until late in the winter and later in the season have a tendency to dry and wrinkle.

The terms poison ivy and oak are often used interchangeably; but the poison ivy is really a vine, and the poison oak is a plant of bush-like habit of growth. There is a western plant known as an oak which is also found growing like a vine. Remember that both types have the three leaflets and the waxy fruit.

The vines of the ivy and oak attach themselves to trees, fences, rocks or anything handy, by means of aerial rootlets (not twining tendrils, the same as is found on many vines). The bushy forms of oaks grow erect, and many reach as high as three to five feet.

POVERTY THAT POSSESSES — Blessed are the poor in spirit: for theirs is the kingdom of heaven.—Matthew 5:3.

REAL VALUE IN CAMPS

Because a boy or young man goes into a gymnasium and learns to box and at the same time gives his body some healthful general training, it does not follow that he is going to become a plug ugly, traveling about with a chip on his shoulder and wantonly attacking those who are weaker or less proficient with their fists than he. Given a youngster with normally good instincts and tendencies, and the contrary is true. The poise and sense of equality with those he meets, which he acquires, and the knowledge that he has ability to take care of himself in case of need, are likely to make him despise quarrelsomeness and bullying and induce him to become a champion rather than an assailant of the weak. He respects himself and he respects others.

Because a boy or young man goes into a Citizens' Military Training camp and learns something about the art of national defense and at the same time becomes bronzed and physically fit as a result of healthful training and life in the open, it does not in the least follow that he is going to become a militarist and go out and shout for war, and advocate a policy of predatory imperialism.

Preparedness is likely to increase rather than lessen the spirit that freed Cuba and asked nothing in return, that assisted Nicaragua to get on its feet and demanded no price, that sent the country into Haiti and Santo Domingo to assist them, and waits only evidence that they have learned to run their own affairs, before leaving them entirely to their devices.

We know to all that means nothing to persons with a pacifist complex, but relatively few people in the country are really afflicted with the disability or actually believe that the only way for the United States to keep out of mischief and avoid becoming a bully, is to make it unable to do anything except cringe and bootlick in case of attack. Most Americans prefer to look those they meet squarely in the eyes. They want a country they can respect and that can command respect from others, and that, while careful to deal fairly and avoid occasion for difference, can take care of itself if need arises, and can protect friends and neighbors in danger of oppression.

To such people we offer a reminder that the summer training camps, where elementary military instruction is taught the free youth of the republic, will soon be opening. The quota for the camps, where the boys and young men of this state will be received, ought to be filled with a rush.

We wonder whether some of the rabid wets ever stop to think how ridiculous they make themselves by kicking up all this row for the benefit of criminal distributors of poison booze.

After all, is loose speculation in Wall street any worse than loose talk in the senate?

NEW YORK—Anent the taxi situation in New York and commissioner Whalen's refusal at first to approve meters to the White Horse company that seeks to place 5,000 taxis on the streets at ten cents for the first quarter mile and five cents for each additional quarter.

Whalen's contention is that 21,000 taxis are enough for any town and that if the present fleet is increased by the advent of a lot of Ford four-seaters, as contemplated, there'll hardly be room for the street cleaners to get about it.

A statistician has figured out that if traffic regulations were amended forbidding empties, scouting for passengers, to make left turns, it would speed up traffic five percent. This little five percent, he says, would permit comfortably 5,000 additional cabs to be added to those already licensed.

A New York milkman was struck by a truck and lost a leg. A jury awarded him $70,000 damages.

On the same day, the wife of a man who was struck by an automobile, and his mind shattered, got a verdict of $17,000.

That shows what New York juries think of brains.

One of New York's "Pilgrim Mothers who missed the first boat" had her clothing ignited the other day and got her name in the paper. Her name is Lillian Buzuszyusky.

A gentleman with a monicker similar to that climbed to the witness stand in a magistrate's court recently. He was asked his name and told it.

"Did you get that?" the magistrate inquired of the stenographer. "Not the whole thing, your honor," replied the disciple of Pitman, "only a whiff of it as it went by."

It flows along forever with trees on every hand.

Green leaves a-floating, castles of foam,

Boats of mine a-floating—where will all come home?

On goes the river and out past the mill,

Away down the river, away down the hill,

Away down the river a hundred miles or more,

Other little children shall bring my boats ashore."

Like little children we are forever setting our boats afloat on the stream. They are boats of hopes and boats of ideas. They are little ships of dreams. Kindness sometimes they are dreams of kindness and happy investment. They pass out of sight, out of mind, out of our lives. Somewhere, somehow, they come into port. Be sure of that.

RADIO PREACHING

Today's preacher, not many, but a growing number, speaks over the radio to an invisible audience of thousands. Perhaps, if he is famous like Cadman or Fosdick, he speaks to millions. Old-time preachers, some of them alive today, gave forty or fifty years to the ministry. Year in and year out they preached twice every Sunday. And in their whole lives they preached to fewer different people than a radio preacher today reaches on a single Sunday.

Words, always dangerous, are vastly more far-reaching in this modern world. The man who approaches the microphone carries upon his shoulders a heavy load of responsibility.

OIL CONSERVATION SAID TO REQUIRE STATE LEGISLATION

By RAY LYMAN WILBUR

Secretary of the Interior (Ray Lyman Wilbur was born at Boonesboro, Ia., April 13, 1875. He is a graduate of Stanford university and Cooper Medical college, later studying abroad. He holds honorary degrees from several universities. From 1900 to 1903 he was assistant professor in physiology at Stanford university, and professor in medicine there from 1903 to 1916, being dean of the school for five years. Since 1916 he has been president of Stanford. He was interior secretary of the Interior by President Hoover last March. In 1917 he was chief of the conservative division, U. S. Food Administration in Washington. He is a member of various societies and medical organizations.)

The responsibility for the handling of the problem of oil conservation in the United States lies with the petroleum industry and the governments of oil-producing states.

The oil industry faces a difficult and complicated situation which can only be met by an earnest study of all of the factors involved and by a spirit of co-operation. This is a fact of civilization here in America. It is acknowledged that there are considerable preventable wastes in the handling of our oil supplies. These are due to the wastes of gas and oil, the use of gasoline containing crude oils in other than gasoline engines, the large amounts left in the ground because of badly managed attacks upon pools and the wastage from evaporation due to the expensive storage above ground.

It is also acknowledged that there is a limited supply of oil available. Estimates vary, but those most expert in the field expect our present volume of production to last for less than a decade.

Only a small portion of the producing lands are in the public domain, although a large potential supply in those areas should be safeguarded. In some states conservation legislation is already in effect. The position of the federal government is not to interfere with the rights and duties of the local state governments, but to lend such aid as it can and to participate in the solution of the problems. This administration has no desire to concentrate the forces of government in Washington. It has every desire to co-operate with the states.

The suggestion has been made that some form of co-operation between the states and the nation government would be the most effective method of conserving waste and conserving our limited supply, and that by such action we could avoid all price-fixing operations. The aim is sought are uniformity of the conservation laws of the major producing states by the enactment of identical conservation legislation and the uniformity of enforcement by some body, such as a joint commission. This could be created by a simple compact of the states ratified by congress.

At all events a good many of the $250 are scared half to death. They voted with their hearts in their mouths. They are scared yet. They will stay scared until after they are re-elected next year—if their districts do re-elect them. Of course that's what they had to take their chances on—and why they are so scared.

To the relatively small number of representatives from districts like Greater New York's couple of a dozen, who voted as they did on general principles of one sort or another, the side they took makes no particular political difference. What does a big city care how its congressmen vote on a farm question?

Two facts were evident in the

HOW TO ACHIEVE BEAUTY

By MME. HELENA RUBINSTEIN

One of the greatest aids to summer beauty and freshness is the commonplace rite of the bath—as I scarcely need to remind you. You bathe daily at all seasons, of course, to keep dainty and fresh, and to fill your soul with the luxurious restfulness that only a soft, warm, fragrant bath can bring.

But in the summer time you bathe even more often and the bath becomes a doubly or triply important beauty rite. Nothing makes you feel so cool and dainty and satisfied in the warm days of summer as a frequent shower bath. You may "tub" yourself often, too, since tub baths are excellent cleansers, but the shower bath is the summer beauty bath par excellence.

Even after a dip in the briny ocean you need the final freshening touch of a cool, clean shower spray to cleanse you perfectly and to satisfy your sense of daintiness, as an ocean bath never can.

Twice a day is not too often to take a shower when the weather is exceedingly warm. And if you are a tennis or golf enthusiast you may need to bathe even oftener. At any event you should start your day with a cool shower, tapering off to the joys of a cold morning bath. The summer is a fine time for you to learn to like it.

Begin gently with a tepid shower. Lather yourself well with a bland, soft cleansing bath soap, and let the vigorous shower spray carry away every bit of residue from your several millions of pores. Rinse yourself well with the tepid water, then finish with a quick, cold splash. Gradually you will make the cold rinse longer and your circulation will improve under the reaction until your skin is as smooth and fine as silk.

A cold shower such as this will start your day off properly all through the summer. It will stimulate your skin to react healthily to the effects of heat and sun, and your pores will throw off their accumulations of dust, perspiration and oil normally, with less tendency to become clogged.

During the day you may repeat the tepid shower and cold rinse whenever you feel the need. And in the evening a final shower will send you to bed feeling cool and clean and perfectly ready to sleep.

If you do not live near the seashore so that you can have the benefit of an invigorating salt bath frequently, you may like to take with your shower an occasional salt rub. Use plain table salt and rub it in handfuls over your moistened body. Then spray clear cold water all over you for several minutes.

No less important than the bath itself are the dainty accessories which go with it. A deodorant talcum powder to puff under your arm-pits and over your hands and feet, and a delicately scented bath powder to pat all over your body, are finishing touches of good grooming that make the summer bath a delightful beauty rite.

And when you bathe in a tub you can use, also, the delicately fragrant bath salts that come in powder or crystal form. Be sure that the scent you choose is delicate and clean-smelling rather than too sweet or heavy. Any scent for the summer season should be light and vaguely elusive. Pine scents, lavender or faintly pungent geranium are much more appropriate than carnation, narcissus or gardenia.

BEHIND THE SCENES IN WASHINGTON

By CHARLES P. STEWART

WASHINGTON, June 21.—A considerably more than two-to-one majority probably never was quite so badly scared before as the 250 congressmen who voted down the debut to all lawmakers from agricultural states—the wheat belt especially—the issue is one of life and death at the polls in 1930. No wonder they squirm.

Consider the debenture plan. To begin with—

What is tariff protection? Why, it is a partial monopoly (rapidly verging on an air-tight one) which certain interests, especially manufacturers, enjoy—enabling them to charge like sixty for everything they have to sell.

The farmers enjoy no such monopoly—not many of them, anyway. This seems to be what ails the farmers. At any rate a lot of them think so; they have to sell cheap, while buying dear—a big disadvantage.

The debenture plan was a scheme to give them a bonus (some of its advocates denied that it would be a bonus, but it would, just the same) to offset agriculture's handicap.

There are four arguments—

1. An agricultural bonus would be a gift to the farmers, out of other people's pockets; therefore wrong.

2. It would be an application of the protective principles; therefore o. k.

3. A farm bonus would be wrong, but so is a protective tariff wrong. So long as the industries get a big tariff rakeoff, the farmers are entitled to a bonus.

4. Two wrongs do not make a right; so the injustice of a monopoly is no excuse for a bonus, too.

midst of the confusion—

1. President Hoover was against debentures.
2. The bulk of the farmers were in favor of them—why wouldn't they be?—a nice present, on a silver platter!

To the disgust of the president and his friends, the senate stuck the debenture clause into the farm bill—to the presidential folk's disgust not only because they considered debentures "uneconomic," but also because the senate's disregard of the White House's wishes amounted to a stiff poke in the administration's jaw.

There was still the house of representatives for the administration to fall back on—to kill the scheme.

And oh! how scared those representatives are! of the next election.

If luck is kind and the farmers have a coking prosperous period between now and November 1930 all may yet be well.

But if the fates are otherwise—if it rains too much or too little in the next 16 months—or Jack Frost gets in his work inopportunely; or insect pests raise the devil; or even if nature is at her lowliest; but the bottom drops out of the market—

Well if so a whole slew of representatives are now serving their last terms in congress. They know it.

Poison Sumac.

There are types of sumac plant which look like the poisonous ivy and oak, except that their berries are red and they have aromatic properties, some being fragrant and other ill scented.

Then there is a type of poison sumac with no resemblance to the ivy and oak. It grows usually in swampy lands, and is known under the name of poison dogwood, poison ash, poison alder, etc. It frequently grows as a tree, but is more abundant as a shrub. The trunk has a smooth, light-gray bark, while the young twigs are reddish-brown at first, then turn to orange-brown. The leaves consist of a slender stalk bearing seven to 13 short-stemmed leaflets, arranged in pairs opposite one another, with a single, usually long-stemmed leaflet at the end.

When these leaves first unfold in the spring, they are a bright orange color. At maturity, the leaflets are dark green and glossy on the upper surface, with prominent scarlet midribs. Early in the summer tiny yellowish-green flowers appear in clusters, about three to eight inches, growing out of the angles of the leaf stems. These ripen into shiny green flowers in loose branching clusters, growing out of the angles of the leaf stalk and its stem, appear in early summer and ripen into fruit (not unlike the mistletoe berries), first green and later white. These remain on the plant until late in the winter and later in the season have a tendency to dry and wrinkle.

LIVING AND LOVING

By MRS. VIRGINIA LEE

"DEAR VIRGINIA LEE: I am coming to you as I cannot turn to my folks or friends. But I do need advice so bad. Husband and I have been married 30 years. He is 55 and I am 48. We always got along nicely. We have a family of seven. Always trusted him, do yet, in spite of appearance. Children all married but two. Have lived in this town for years.

Within the last six months he has met a widow whose husband has been dead a year. She has eight children. He spends most of his evenings with her, either at her home, or takes her in the car riding alone. When I first heard of this I asked him if it would not be better for me to meet her and both of us call and take her out together, but he was very angry. Said he did not do anything wrong and did not want me trailing along.

I tried to make him see it would make people talk of her and us, but he said let them talk, and if you do not like it you can lump it. This has been going on for months and people are passing remarks and I cannot stand it to see the pity in their faces when I look at them. Later I have told him that if he would be happier with her and her family he should find a place for me and the children far away, as I cannot stand the torture of this any longer.

Do you think it would be better for me to go to another place with the children? I only want to try, as I have always done, to bring up the children to be true men and women. I have always been a true wife, have never had a man friend, never had any enjoyment he could not share. I have devoted my life to him, and always been happy with him and I think I'd make it my business to call on her and see just what type of woman she is. I know that type will be hard and humiliating, but if it was my case, I am sure I would want to know just what I was facing. If you could talk the matter out woman to woman, it might make things clearer. I am the brazen type who makes light of the matter and laughs at you. I would tell Friend Husband that you are leaving the field to her. Then pack your things and go away with the children.

Did you read the letter published recently in this column, in which a man asks why an intelligent woman will put up with such a performance in a husband when a man in a like case would throw the wife out at once? Love always breeds for a man, doesn't it, but one's self-respect is something, and it is hard to maintain that in face of such humiliation.

PETER'S ADVENTURES

By MRS. FLORENCE SMITH VINCENT

SPIDER PUTS HIS TRUST IN PETER

Spider stared so hard and so long at Peter that Peter grew nervous. He knew Spider was puzzled and why, and he felt like laughing. But he remembered his manners. And at last Spider spoke and this time less crossly.

"The boys I have seen have all been huge creatures who could crush out our lives in their fingers, or—with no effort at all—stomp upon us. But you—why you are no larger than I am! Are you quite sure that you really are a boy? Or perhaps you're only teasing me. Come now, that's what you are up to, isn't it? You really are some sort of an insect, aren't you?"

"No sir, I am not!" Peter answered two questions in one breath. And plucking up courage patted Spider on that fellow's fat back. "I'll tell you a secret. When I am right size I am as big as the boys you know. The reason I am little like you is because I love the wee folk of field and forest and never hurt nor harm them. Once I saved the life of an old oak tree and in gratitude that old tree gave me the magic power to become as small as I wanted to. But I can grow big just as quickly as I've a mind to."

This was too much for the bewildered spider.

"I don't believe you!" declared that insect, flatly.

"Well maybe I'll show you!" laughed Peter. However I'd break your web if I tried it right now, so I will wait until I have my feet on the ground! Meanwhile it is too pleasant sitting in the sun for me to be in a hurry to climb down the lacy ladder. Besides I would like to ask you a few questions, Mr. Spider. Would you mind? You look very wise and I'll bet a cookie there are any number of things you could tell me!"

There was no more vain fellow in all Insect Land than this same Mr. Spider. At Peter's words he puffed up like a pouter pigeon. Then he winked his eight eyes at Peter.

"I am glad that you, at least, realize what a clever chap I am!" murmured he. "Not that I like to boast, but—"

Spider looked so self-important and his eyes bulged so queerly that again Peter had all he could do to keep from laughing in the insect's face. But Spider, taking himself seriously, went on:

"I just wish my dear wife could have heard you. You must be sure to tell her what you think of me when you meet her. I hate to admit it, but I am afraid my wife is just a trifle stupid. She often remarks I know nothing at all. Poor little lady! She doesn't know a good husband when she has one. Oh, I tell you, married life is hard for a man when his wife doesn't appreciate him. If only I had known what a talker my wife was I would never have married. Why, my dear fellow, she never lets me get a word in edgewise!"

With the season nearly half completed, the Downtown Country Club softball nine is leading the National League by a one-game margin and in the American League, Coates Barber Shop, Hooven and Allison Co. and the Post Office are locked in a triple tie for the leadership.

The complexion of the American League race changed unexpectedly as a result of three straight setbacks sustained by the Coates nine, which had previously won four games in a row. Rotarians proved particularly poison to the league-leaders and by a surprising display of strength took two consecutive games from Coates.

SUICIDE OF ALLEGED SLAYER CHEATS LAW

EL PASO, Texas, June 24.—The murder trial of Jose Marin, bankrupt operator of Mexican mining properties which was scheduled to open today instead will be removed from the docket. Marin took his life yesterday by drinking poison in his cell.

Once a prosperous and influential citizen, Marin lost his money and laid the blame to Frank J. Lyons and H. D. Oppenheimer, El Paso, his legal representative at the time.

Questioning of a number of friends who visited Marin during his confinement was going on today to determine who smuggled poison to him at the jail.

RESERVES WIN EASY VICTORY SUNDAY IN FREE HITTING TILT

Kimbels All Stars Unable To Check Xenia Attack

Behind the invincible pitching of Maxton, the Reserves recorded their third straight victory, defeating Kimbels All Stars, a Columbus colored nine, 12 to 2 Sunday afternoon at Washington Park.

After hurling three scoreless rounds, Western, visiting pitcher, was driven to cover in the fourth when the Reserves batted entirely around and scored four runs. Byrd replaced him and finished the game although reached for runs in each of the last four innings.

While his mates were pounding the ball, Maxton held the enemy well in check, fanning nine batters and granting only eight scattered hits.

Columbus tallied one unearned run in the second when Elie, first batter, singled and reached third on an error by Durnbaugh. Maxton struck out Clark but the runner scored as McCann was being thrown out at first. In the sixth, the visitors counted what proved to be their last marker and it was also unearned. St. John was safe on Conley's error, took second on a single by Byrd, stole third and scored on a single by Clark, who was subsequently nipped at second on an accurate throw by Weller.

Maxton really deserved a shut-out victory as neither of the Columbus runs were orthodox.

Durnbaugh led the Reserves at bat with three singles, followed by Captain Jay Conley, who drove out a single and then knocked a home run in the fifth with the bases empty. Langolis and Weller each made two hits. Byrd and Elie hit safely twice for the visiting team.

Next Sunday afternoon the Reserves have booked a game with the Hillsboro Indians. Score:

ATHLETICS DEFEAT YANKEES IN CRUCIAL MID-YEAR SERIES

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Philadelphia Athletics came through the first crucial test of the season against the New York Yankees with flying colors and today were leading the American League by eight and one-half games.

Winning the final game of the series Sunday, 7 to 4, the Athletics took the series, three games to two, and left New York with a longer lead than they had when they arrived at Yankee Stadium Friday.

The three-day series, with double-headers Friday and Saturday, broke all attendance records. A total of 184,096 persons saw the five games, eclipsing the number—177,152,—which saw the September series between the same two clubs last year.

Al Simmons, Athletics' left fielder, proved the star of the series. In five games he made thirteen hits, drove in nine runs and compiled a batting average of .619. He hit four home runs, one triple and three doubles.

His record for each game follows:

	AB	R	H
First game	5	5	5
Second game	4	0	3
Third game	4	2	2
Fourth game	5	1	1
Fifth game	3	2	2
Total	21	10	13

The Yankees went down fighting in every game and Babe Ruth and Co. refuse to concede the pennant to the Athletics in spite of the latter's long lead.

The two contenders will open another important series at Philadelphia Friday when they meet in three games, and Miller Huggins is optimistic over the Yankees' chances.

"We'll turn the tables on the Athletics in the next series," Ruth said. "They haven't won the pennant by a long shot yet."

Meanwhile, it is up to the Yankees to stay out of third place. They were idle today, giving the St. Louis Browns an opportunity to move ahead of them if the Browns win.

OLD TIMERS TODAY

In Which George Stovall Writes About Baseball Stars Of Other Days.

By GEORGE STOVALL

Former Star Big League First Baseman and Former Manager Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Cardinals. Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Rated by many writers and fans as the greatest all-around baseball player of all time, Hans Wagner, once famous shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates, still lives near the scene of his greatest triumphs as a batter and fielder.

The Flying Dutchman of the National league now has an interest in a sporting goods store at Pittsburgh and recently was appointed sergeant-at-arms for the state legislature at Harrisburg.

Wagner hit better than 300 for seventeen years in succession, was the leader of his league at bat eight times and was a wonder as a fielder and base runner. He was a star in the three major departments of play, and no less a critic than John J. McGraw of the Giants endorses the choice of many other experts who pick Wagner as the greatest of them all in general excellence of play.

Wagner had the deep chest, breadth of shoulders and long barrel body that denote great strength, and he drove the ball at terrific speed to the far corners of the field. His playing at short was phenomenal. Although Hans looked awkward, with his short bowed legs, he covered an amazing amount of ground around the short field.

The Flying Dutchman was quick as a cat on his feet and stole many bases. In one game at the Polo Grounds in New York, Hans was caught between bases, but vaulted clear over a fielder's head to reach third base safely.

Here is Wagner's fielding record for his twenty-one years as a major leaguer—playing with Louisville (then a big league club) and Pittsburgh:

Pouts, 4,320. Assists, 5,664. Errors, 612. Total chances accepted 10,596. Fielding average .943.

His batting record:
From 1897 to 1917: .334, .305, .359, .380, .352, .320, .335, .349, .363, .339, .350, .354, .339, .320, .334, .334, .300, .252, .274, .287, .265. Life average, .321.

Home runs, 100. Three-base hits, 252. Doubles, 640. Singles, 2,438.

What a great loss it was to baseball when on a late summer's day in 1917 Hans Wagner lopped off the field and took off his Pirate uniform with the announcement that he was through forever with big league baseball!

ATHLETICS DEFEAT YANKEES IN CRUCIAL MID-YEAR SERIES

NEW YORK, June 24.—The Philadelphia Athletics came through the first crucial test of the season against the New York Yankees with flying colors and today were leading the American League by eight and one-half games.

Winning the final game of the series Sunday, 7 to 4, the Athletics took the series, three games to two, and left New York with a longer lead than they had when they arrived at Yankee Stadium Friday.

The three-day series, with double-headers Friday and Saturday, broke all attendance records. A total of 184,096 persons saw the five games, eclipsing the number—177,152,—which saw the September series between the same two clubs last year.

Al Simmons, Athletics' left fielder, proved the star of the series. In five games he made thirteen hits, drove in nine runs and compiled a batting average of .619. He hit four home runs, one triple and three doubles.

His record for each game follows:

Game	AB	R	H	E
First game	5	5	5	5
Second game	4	0	3	0
Third game	4	2	2	2
Fourth game	5	1	1	1
Fifth game	3	2	2	2
Total	21	10	13	10

The Yankees went down fighting in every game and Babe Ruth and Co. refuse to concede the pennant to the Athletics in spite of the latter's long lead.

The two contenders will open another important series at Philadelphia Friday when they meet in three games, and Miller Huggins is optimistic over the Yankees' chances.

"We'll turn the tables on the Athletics in the next series," Ruth said. "They haven't won the pennant by a long shot yet."

Meanwhile, it is up to the Yankees to stay out of third place. They were idle today, giving the St. Louis Browns an opportunity to move ahead of them if the Browns win.

CONGRATULATIONS
JACK DEMPSEY

William Harrison (Jack) Dempsey is 34 years old today. The great heavy-weight was born in Manassas, Col., on June 24, 1895.

Dempsey is without doubt the most colorful figure the ring has had in a generation. Springing up from the hobo camps, Jack smashed his way to the forefront of the ring business and rolled up such a string of one and two-round knockouts that it has remained unequalled.

Dempsey scored knockouts over more important fighters than any other ringster ever has. Among his kayo victims were Jess Willard, Luis Firpo, Georges Carpentier, Gunboat Smith, Bill Brennan, Carl Morris, Fred Fulton, Billy Miske and Homer Smith.

Miss Lois Shields, who has taught in the public schools of Cincinnati this year, is spending her vacation with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. William Shields, E. Market St.

Bambino Swings Hard as of Yore

The sight of Babe Ruth back in uniform after a short illness gladdens the hearts of the Yankee fans at New York. The Bam is swinging at a few just to get his muscles loosened up after his layoff. Babe knows that he has plenty of competition with Lou Gehrig smacking them out the way he does now, so figures some practice will not do him any harm.

OLD TIMERS TODAY In Which George Stovall Writes About Baseball Stars Of Other Days.

By GEORGE STOVALL
Former Star Big League First Baseman and Former Manager Cleveland Indians, St. Louis Browns and Kansas City Federals. Written Especially for Central Press and The Gazette

Rated by many writers and fans as the greatest all-around baseball player of all time, Hans Wagner, once famous shortstop of the Pittsburgh Pirates, still lives near the scene of his greatest triumphs as a batter and fielder.

The Flying Dutchman of the National league now has an interest in a sporting goods store at Pittsburgh and recently was appointed sergeant-at-arms for the state legislature at Harrisburg.

Wagner hit better than 300 for seventeen years in succession, was the leader of his league at bat eight times and was a wonder as a fielder and base runner. He was a star in the three major departments of play, and no less a critic than John J. McGraw of the Giants endorses the choice of many other experts who pick Wagner as the greatest of them all in general excellence of play.

Wagner had the deep chest, breadth of shoulders and long barrel body that denote great strength, and he drove the ball at terrific speed to the far corners of the field. His playing at short was phenomenal. Although Hans looked awkward, with his short bowed legs, he covered an amazing amount of ground around the short field.

The Flying Dutchman was quiet as a cat on his feet and stole many bases. In one game at the Polo Grounds in New York, Hans was caught between bases, but vaulted clear over a fielder's head to reach third base safely.

Here is Wagner's fielding record for his twenty-one years as a major league player—playing with Louisville (then a big league club) and Pittsburgh:

Putouts, 4,329. Assists, 5,664. Errors, 612. Total chances accepted 10,596. Fielding average .943.

His batting record:
From 1897 to 1917: .334, .305, .359, .380, .352, .329, .335, .319, .363, .339, .350, .354, .339, .320, .334, .334, .309, .252, .274, .265. Life average, .321.

Home runs, 160. Three-base hits, 252. Doubles, 649. Singles, 2,438.

What a great loss it was to baseball when on a late summer's day in 1917 Hans Wagner lopped off the field and took off his Pirate uniform with the announcement that he was through forever with big league baseball!

Columbus; and Emma Reed, Springfield school teacher.

The following committee members were pupils of later dates: Robert Odell, of Bexley, Columbus, assistant prosecuting attorney of Franklin County; Isaac and William Thrasher, both of Cincinnati, connected with the Methodist Book Concern; Harlan Campbell and Alice Green, both of Dayton; Nevin Jordan, Waynesville; and Ray Dawson, a Home graduate this year.

Major Burton announced that in connection with the celebration plans, arrangements are being made for the largest reunion of former pupils in the history of the institution.

Morning exercises on "Pioneer Day" open with a business meeting immediately following the breakfast hour. At the conclusion of the meeting the entire audience will surround the nearby flag pole and with band accompaniment will join in singing "Rally Round the Flag." Following a short service under the direction of William Thrasher the ex-pupils will load in waiting automobiles and proceed on a pilgrimage to Xenia to meet Governor Cooper and escort him to the Home. If there is sufficient time the auto caravan will parade the main business section of the city and stop for a short band concert at the Court House, returning to the Home as near 10:30 as possible.

The service at the Home auditorium will begin with band music, the singing of "America" by the audience and an address—the original plea to the legislative committee to establish the Home, by E. Howard Gilkey, represented by Captain Ray Dawson, a Home graduate this year. The time is supposed to be February 26, 1869 and the place, the Xenia Opera House.

After the audience has sung one verse of the "Star Spangled Banner" Governor Cooper will deliver the chief address, representing Governor R. B. Hayes. After the band has played "Marching Through Georgia" the audience will sing one verse of "Tenting on the Old Camp Ground" and the Rev. J. King Gibson, D. D., Dayton, national chaplain of the G. A. R., representing that organization, will give an address. The audience will then sing a verse of "Red, White and Blue," and the pupils will recess for lunch.

The afternoon session will begin at 1:30 at the auditorium, signalized by the ringing of the old school bell. Prominent guests representing those who pioneered for the Home will be introduced and Dr. W. A. Galloway, Xenia, will give a talk.

Hensley Heaton, a Home graduate this year, will read an original poem and the chief address will be given by Judge E. S. Matthias, justice of the Ohio Supreme Court, former commander of the state department of Spanish-American War Veterans, representing that organization.

Other addresses will be made by Leonard Money, Woodfield, O., Home trustee and a past commander of the American Legion, and by E. Howard Gilkey, representing the ex-pupils.

An effort is being made to have present at this session representatives of all those who pioneered for the Home. David S. Inalls, assistant secretary of the navy in charge of aviation, has been invited to come and is expected to attend. Mr. Inalls, it is possible to arrange his official duties, has promised to fly from Washington, D. C., to be at the Home. He has the distinction of being the only American Naval Ace in the World War.

"We are also expecting to have with us a son of Chaplain George W. Collier, also a son of Dr. Priest," Maj. Burton said. "Horace S. Kiefer, grandson of General J. Warren Keifer, has promised to be present to represent the general, who is too feeble to attend, he is 95 years of age."

The Home cadet band will be on hand to furnish music and in order to accommodate the large crowds Major Burton revealed that plans have been made to have the nearly 275 children who will be at the Home at the time of the reunion, encamped at separate camps by that date, so that there will be ample accommodations in the cottages for the visitors.

Albert W. Hudson, 73, Dayton, commercial printer, oldest living ex-pupil of the Home, will attend the reunion. He entered the institution when he was 13 years old December 28, 1869 and was the first child ever discharged from the Home.

Judge Britt Brown, Dayton and his brother, E. Frank Brown, Columbus, will be present to represent their father, Col. E. Frank Brown, who was governor of the Dayton Military Home in 1868-69, and received in that Home nearly twenty children before the Xenia home was opened. The Home was established in 1870 and reunions have been held yearly since 1881. The opening day of the reunion will be devoted to registration of Cleveland, O.; Mrs. Florence Gilkey, wife of E. Howard Gilkey, Xenia.

THE FLAT-TIRE

By ALMA SIOUX SCARBERRY, AUTHOR OF "MAKE UP" ETC.

A DRAB LITTLE MOTH FLIES TO HAPPINESS

READ THIS FIRST:

Vivian Matthews, shy and unhappy because she was a doorstep baby, is called a "flat tire" by the younger set of Bender, Kentworth Hillman Johns III, to secure his grandfather's fortune, offers her one hundred thousand dollars and a divorce in Paris at the end of a year she will marry him and secretly in love with him, she consents. In New York Vivian attracts Mann Barkow, famous artist, and he flies to Kansas to paint her. Aurelia "Dovie" Jansen, who plotted Kent to marry Count Von Popper in Paris, has returned mysteriously without her count. She has a frank talk with her mother about ways and means of getting Kent back into her net again.

While Vivian is posing in the stunning white flying outfit Barkow has brought her, Dovie calls at the house and is met and thoroughly upset by "Pat" Sullivan, Vivian's best girl friend and a former chorus girl.

Mrs. Jansen, alarmed at the news Dovie brings back of the changed Vivian, decides to call on Kent and "fix things." Vivian sees Kent go to the Jansens that night—and sends for Barkow.

NOW GO ON WITH THE STORY

CHAPTER XVII

Dovie had spent two hours getting ready for her interview with Kent. She had not left a stone unturned to bring back all the old appeal of girlish innocence.

There was a little old voile dress with a bow matching the blue in her eyes. She had worn it on a starry summer night when he had kissed her and asked her to be his wife. She remembered it in an old trunk upstairs, and sent the housekeeper up to get it and press it.

Traces of her healthy color she carefully covered with light powder. She decided her lips would be more appealing with a little color and took a liquid rouge and touched them carefully. Then she fluffed her hair and tied a tiny blue ribbon around it—as though it were to hold it back. It gave her a becomingly childish look.

Mamma Jansen, rocking blissfully in a chair beside her dressing table, smiled to herself. Her daughter might have her failings. But in some things no one who knew her could accuse her of being dumb. She knew her men!

She was sitting, her head buried in her arms in a big chair in the living room, when the housekeeper let Kent in. Mrs. Jansen was not present.

Kent stood for a moment looking down at her. She was a pathetic picture, her golden curls lying on her arms—and the little dress. The dear little white dress that he would never forget.

He felt his heart coming up in his throat—and made a little stifled sound. Suddenly Dovie raised her head, as though she had not known he was in the room before and jumped from her chair. Her arms were around him—her large blue eyes, pools of anguish, were searching his face. He could not speak. Just looked down at her and teased his eyes on her pale loveliness. Dovie buried her face in his shoulder. He made no attempt to answer her caress.

"Oh, my dear—my dear," her voice was small and helpless. "What can I say? Don't look at me like that. Please! Please! I can't bear it!"

Finally he answered her. His voice was colder than she had hoped. He was master of himself, at least outwardly, although her nearness took the breath from his great, vibrant body.

"I came because your mother said you wanted to see me." "Then—then you didn't come because you wanted to see ME." Her voice broke.

"That," he answered coldly, "has nothing to do with the question. She said you had a few explanations. That you felt you owed them to me. If you do, I'm here to listen—for a few moments."

She was in his arms again, clinging to him, her arms around his neck, her lips seeking his—all the old wiles in full play. Kent felt himself growing weaker. Pride battled with his desire to crush her so that he dropped his hands to his sides and buried his nails in his palms.

"Oh—I have a terrible confession to make, Kent. Maybe you'll hate me. Don't! Please don't hate me."

Then she told her story. She told it well, choking with sobs, her blue eyes looking into his, studying his every expression. What an actress! She had missed her calling. But, of course, Kent, in his blindness, only knew that she was making a confession—and that she was little and heart broken, and loved him.

She had taken a drink the night she met Count Von Popper. The first champagne she had ever had in her life. She didn't know what she was drinking—and it went to her head.

Then she didn't remember. She came to and she was in the count's rooms at a well-known Paris hotel and it was morning. He had begged her to marry him.

"I—I thought I would die, Kent. It was dreadful. But I felt I had to vindicate my honor. So I consented, and we were married that afternoon. I felt I could never come to you—not—not after a dreadful thing like that. I believe I was drugged, Kent."

Kent cursed under his breath. The rotter! The dirty swine! Oh, some day he would see him and he would make him pay for this horrid thing that he had done to her girl he loved. When Dovie said that there were tears in Kent's eyes she knew her battle was won.

What an inspiration! She pulled him to the big chair and threw herself in his arms.

"Let—let me stay here in your arms just—just a minute, and then we'll say good-bye," she told him, smothering his lips with hers.

The world went blank for Kent. Two hours later Mrs. Jansen crept softly to the living room door and looked. They were still in the big chair, locked in a long kiss.

She went up to her boudoir, threw a magazine in the air and mixed a large, potent highball.

It was a warm evening for late September, and Vivian sat on the veranda waiting for Barkow. The house was filled with beautiful, expensive furniture. The portraits of the Johns ancestors seemed to stare right at her from nearly every wall in the house, and it seemed to Vivian there was a look of resentment on their faces. She fancied they wanted to say to her: "You nobody! Coming here to our house, where you don't belong. You're getting just what you deserve."

She could scarcely keep her eyes off the Jansen house—watching for Kent to leave. He had been there an hour when Barkow strolled up the driveway.

"Ah, there you are, Vivian. My sweet. I decided Vivian was a particularly fitting title for you today. With your vivid red eyes—and your green hair."

Pretty things—nonsense. That is what she needed tonight. She signed ever so slightly, and leaned back among the pillows of the long porch swing.

"Sit down here beside me and tell me nice things," she was surprised to hear herself say.

And Mann was, too. He smiled his most amorous smile.

"Ah, had I known, little Tiger Lily, I should have brought my guitar or violin to serenade you."

She jumped up.

"You play. Oh, lovely. There is a violin in the house. Kent's grandfather loved violin music."

SUMMER CAMPS PROVIDED FOR VACATIONS OF HOME PUPILS

Plans for summer encampments for about 250 children of the O. S. and S. O. Home, arranged to benefit those pupils who of necessity must remain at the institution all summer, being denied vacation trips provided by relatives and friends, are being announced by Major C. V. Burton, superintendent.

Beginning July 1 or 2, about 150 boys will be encamped on the E. J. Griffith farm, located near Clinton directly opposite Camp Miami, the Boy Scout camp on the Bryn state farm.

The camp site proper, donated by Mr. Griffith, is 200 feet square. It will be known as the "Myers V. Cooper Camp" and will be laid out in military street formation.

STUDENTS RECEIVE SULLIVAN AWARDS

The Algernon Sidney Sullivan award, made annually to two members of the senior class of Antioch College, has been granted to Nelson Urban, Dayton, O., and Miss Mary McGee, of Helena, Mont.

The award is made to the man and woman who, throughout college life, best personify the highest spiritual and humanitarian qualities practically applied to daily living, as distinct from high scholarship, athletic achievement, professional ability or political leadership.

Miss McGee, as a part of her co-operative work, has taught in the junior high school at Fremont, O., and will also teach there next year.

Urban has done much of his outside work with the Frigidaire Corp. in Dayton. He leaves this June to visit the League of Nations assembly at Geneva, Switzerland, and upon his return will enter the employ of the League of Nations Association.

HOME WATCHMAN RELIEVED OF POST

Alleged to have fallen asleep on duty, William Pickles, night watchman at the O. S. and S. O. Home, has been discharged by Major Charles V. Burton, superintendent, for conduct "contrary to the peace and protection of the institution," he revealed Saturday. The dismissal became effective June 19.

Major Burton said that Pickles, who has been employed at the Home at different times for a number of years, was lately seen around the institution during the day and was warned that he could not expect to perform his duties properly at night if he did not get his rest during the day.

"Lately there has been evidence showing that I was not getting efficient night protection," said Major Burton, "and I have discharged Pickles after he was found sleeping while on duty."

Scott Lynch, this city, is filling the position made vacant by the discharge of Pickles.

SUMMER SCHOOL AT WILBERFORCE OPENS

Edmund D. Washington, who has been serving as acting dean of the university, will be director of the summer school, which will last six weeks, ending August 3, after which the summer vacation period begins.

SUMMER CAMPS PROVIDED FOR VACATIONS OF HOME PUPILS

Plans for summer encampments for about 250 children of the O. S. and S. O. Home, arranged to benefit those pupils who of necessity must remain at the institution all summer, being denied vacation trips provided by relatives and friends, are being announced by Major C. V. Burton, superintendent.

Beginning July 1 or 2, about 150 boys will be encamped on the E. J. Griffith farm, located near Clifton directly opposite Camp Miami, the Boy Scout camp on the Bryas state farm.

The camp site proper, donated by Mr. Griffin, is 200 feet square. It will be known as the "Myers Y. Cooper Camp" and will be laid out in military street formation.

Captain O. H. Cornwell, military instructor at the Home and commandant of Company L, 147th Infantry, Ohio National Guard, will have charge of the military instruction and Ernest Blackburn, Xenia Scoutmaster, will look after the hikes and recreational program for the boys.

A regular program will be followed each day. Regular cooks will be on hand from the Home but for the most part the boys will take turns doing their own K. P. duty. Fresh water will be obtained from springs and a hydraulic dam will carry water up on the bank for shower bath purposes.

The camp will last until school starts next September 1 and will be retained for possible use next fall, a permanent kitchen having been installed. A military field range will be used in the kitchen.

Major Burton disclosed that the fresh air camp at Bellbrook has been obtained for use as the camp for girls, having been donated by G. E. Gorman, Dayton, of the Gorman and Peters real estate firm. Between 100 and 125 girls will be encamped there until September, starting June 25 or 26.

Miss Geraldine Witter, daughter of Herman Witter, Canton, former state director, of the industrial relations commission, has been employed for the summer as recreational director. She graduated from the University of Michigan this year.

The camp site has a regular dormitory equipped with shower baths, motor-driven apparatus for a water supply, electric lights and a telephone. There is also dining room space and an additional kitchen has been built.

As for the boys' camp, regular cooks will be present but the girls, especially those belonging to the senior class, will do most of their own cooking. Home matrons will supervise everything and healthful programs, including swimming in a spring water pool and hikes will be arranged.

The camp site covers four acres. Tents, each holding six girls, will also be erected to care for the overflow.

Both camps have been inspected by Dr. R. H. Grube, county health commissioner, and an analysis has been taken of the water supplies. Tents and equipment for both camps were authorized by the Home trustees and Superintendent Burton hopes that the healthful diversion for the boys and girls may be continued every year for several years during the hot summer months.
